collecting is usually understood as an activity that bestows permanence unity and meaning on otherwise scattered and ephemeral objects in the redemption of things samuel frederick emphasizes that to collect things however always entails displacing immobilizing and potentially disfiguring them too he argues that the dispersal of objects seemingly antithetical to the collector s task is essential to the logic of gathering and preservation through analyses of collecting as a dialectical process of preservation and loss the redemption of things illustrates this paradox by focusing on objects that challenge notions of collectability ephemera detritus and trivialities such as moss junk paper scraps dust scent and the transitory moment in meticulous close readings of works by gotthelf stifter keller rilke gläuser and frisch and by examining an experimental film by oskar fischinger frederick reveals how the difficulties posed by these fleeting fragile and forsaken objects help to reconceptualize collecting as a poetic activity that makes the world of scattered things uniquely palpable and knowable

this book examines how latin american detective stories portray individualism and the state through the figures of the private eye and the police fabricio tocco argues that these portrayals constitute a far more radical critique than the one developed by the anglo american canon culminating in a transnational poetics of failure rooted in dissatisfaction with the neoliberal state this book aims to reintroduce subjectivity in psychology and social sciences exploring the uniqueness of human life it features contributions from 26 scholars across various perspectives including cultural psychology developmental psychology feminist perspectives semiotics and anthropology
